

Hi Comic!

Sorry I haven't, like, directly communicated in a hot minute. It's very hard for me, for whatever reason! The server feels like a sort of, uh, "sacred place," if you will, in terms of what I should be saying there. I mean, the title is literally "Vore Roleplaying Server." That isn't to say we can't talk about other things; we send each other memes every so often, but even as I write this, I write it because I feel like I can't be direct in the server.

I can communicate with you though! I mean, look at what I'm doing right now, right? I know that this is a PDF, and it's not a straight up DM, but I've put it in a place where I know you look: my About Me. Therefore, I know you'll see it; therefore, it is a message! A letter, even! But seriously, I do want you to read this when you have the time and reply at your leisure. My instinct is to want to communicate via instant messages with you, either via the server or our DMs, but I don't know if I can do that without being awkward necessarily?

Like, the manner in which I'm typing now is not only extremely casual, but it is a letter. And because this is a letter, I can think out every word before I save it and send it to you. Am I going to do that? Am I going to censor myself that much? Honestly, probably not, but I do then feel it necessary to make it known that I'm writing this in only one night in a little over an hour. And, I did do a quick once-over, just to make sure I'm not completely unintelligible.

And, as for this writing being casual, yeah! Or, at least, I hope it comes off that way, because that's how I feel writing it. I think I put it in my About Me at one point that I "feel like a mad scientist explaining things sometimes," and like, A. that's true, and B. I feel like that quote is gonna become really relevant in terms of this PDF somehow. Kehehe...

Anyways, thanks for taking the time to read this. Now that I've gotten through all my thoughts about how I talk to you, I can finally carry on talking to you! Uh, hi!! I'm sorry for not being around a ton, all of my friends have the same complaint of me as of late. Actually, you're the only friend who hasn't outright complained about my lack of availability. I'd imagine the more prevalent issue to you is actually my over-promising.

I don't mean to do it, but I can certainly feel when it happens! Like, so often, I feel like I go "I'm gonna be available during X" and then I'm not! Granted, it's not like I'm "committing" to saying that usually (AKA, usually I don't send that as a message in the server, I stick it in my About Me and hope that you see it (which you usually do)), but I still end up communicating that I'm gonna be available at X and then not being available!

I dunno, I feel bad, but I also feel like you understand. Or, at least that you've always had the capability to understand, and I just haven't been explaining up until now. And, weird as it might sound, that's very comforting to me.

Anyways, enough apologizing! I'd like to explain a bit of my thinking and my plans going forward. Firstly, we've known each other a while. Like, three years a while, and I feel like I barely know you. That might hurt to hear, but I want you to know that I am not a normal person. I am the odd element here, particularly my dog water memory. There are distinct elements to you that I should've been picking up on this whole time.

For example, I took a six month hiatus from roleplaying at one point, then came back, and you weren't the slightest bit upset with me! I thought being angry with me would be justifiable, but also, a wise person once told me "it just seems silly to get upset with someone over that." And, like... yeah! It does! Kehehe!

Point being that, a few weeks into my coming back, I disappeared for like a full seven days without a word. Then, when I came back, I was super apologetic, and you were like "no dude, it's totally fine," and I was surprised. It was literally that night that I thought about it and I was like "they weren't angry with me for disappearing for six months – they've told me outright that they're okay waiting for me – why did I think there was even a chance they'd be upset with me for disappearing for a week?"

Uh, the answer is that I fear that you think I don't value your time, but that's neither here nor there. I do want to be clear about that though, I do value your time, and that's exactly why I bring up over-promising and not being around – it's because I very much feel that with everyone else around me. So, there's a fair chance I'm projecting and over-worrying about this all, but at the end of the day, I just want you to be comfortable with our arrangement.

Actually, speaking of our "arrangement," I've got a lot of thoughts about that. Particularly, my sexual interest is not something that needs to be kept anymore! Like, don't get me wrong, if we're gonna do vore, I think I'd rather my sexual interest be kept, but on the chance you want to do more, my mind palace has opened up frankly. What I mean by that is, all I need in a roleplay is to play Alucard. As long as I get to be my mouse, I'll be happy to continue. And, no offense, but you strike me as someone who owns characters and may or may not do a fair bit of thinking and/or writing about them.

Personally, I don't think a super ton about my characters, and I don't have an insane interconnected world between all of them, but I do think a lot about the characters I own that other people are interested in. For example, recently, you just straight up told me "I like learning about other people's characters!" (in reference to yourself, obviously), and like... Dude, I don't know how you can say that to me and expect not to set off a chain reaction lasting multiple months that causes me to come up with an elaborate pretense to not only canonize all the vore roleplays but also potentially set up something bigger – or also go nowhere and end, but have gone to an interesting place nonetheless!

I don't want to spoil anything, but I do a fair bit of thinking when people inform me of their interest. Particularly, I only thought of all of that because, on one night, you decided to prompt me about Al, and giggle at his skivvy situation. Mind you, that was all over the course of the following week or so, but I still thought of a pretty cool pretense involving a character you don't even know about. Or, if you do, you barely know about him. I'll show you at the end, you'll see in a bit.

For now though, I'm straight up more or less prompting you to tell me about your characters in a way you see fit. If you want to write a "letter" in a similar vein to me, that's totally an option! You could also feel free to ramble at me via text message, if that's more comfortable for you. Regardless, after that, I kinda wanna have my mouse interact with your characters in some way. I don't even know what way! Roleplay, obviously – but like, as far as what they'd be doing goes, that's where I'm lost.

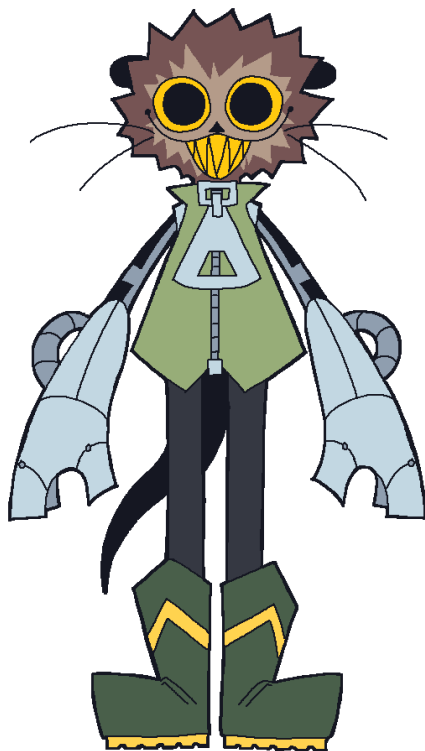

That's where I need to be filled in, actually. When it comes to our characters interacting, there could be some totally obvious thing I'm missing that comes with the knowledge of your characters. I will say though, as I'm a musician, and my fursona of the same name mirrors me, you could basically be getting character themes in-universe outta him- me! Whatever! Point is, I hope you'd enjoy getting cool music centered around your characters, and also I hope you delight in getting to share your characters with me! If you feel comfortable doing so, of course.

As far as interacting with you more goes, I'm really sorry but, I'm really not sure what the fuck to do! Like, I really wanna talk to you more, but I'm still awkward around you! I feel like I need a "get to know you" period, but after having known you for three years, is that even really appropriate to ask of me? I mean, to be fair, how well do you think you know me, right?

Honestly, I probably come off like a worrywart who can't come out of his shell. That could just be my own brutally honest look at myself from my own perspective, but I feel like my over-worrying definitely bled into our interactions hard at some point. Again though, that could be me misperceiving. That's a very common issue. Actually, holy shit, I don't know if I've told you, kind of important: I've recently figured out I've got autism and ADHD, and I didn't know that for the first twenty one years of my life, and that's fun to be piecing together.

Anywho, awesome segway time. I'll wrap up quick, try and explain that "scenario idea" I had for a non-vore roleplay. It's not really a scenario in itself, as its just an idea that can be tacked onto any existing world with Alucard. Well, Alucard and that other new character I was yapping about earlier. His name is Seymour, by the way, and he looks like this:

I don't wanna give too much away, but it would involve any character that you yourself are playing – particularly your fursona, if you have one – either knowing about Seymour externally (say, they dreamed of him, potentially), or having Seymour know about them externally and reach out to them. Now, I can certainly find a Seymour-ish reason to do that – I can find a thousand Seymour-ish reasons to want to do that, but I also think having them externally “know” of Seymour would be interesting. That's also just me though, and that is a tad unrealistic. My disbelief was never that hard to suspend, I'll say. And I'm a sucker for sci-fi.

If you ever do feel like taking me up on that offer though, lemme know! Much more importantly, get back to me about your characters! Also, I know I touched on it a bit earlier, but as far as corresponding to this letter goes, literally do not fucking worry. My schedule is jam packed, and this is a lot of information to take in to begin with. I understand if this takes you a bit to process and respond to. Hell, it took me like a month to straighten out my thoughts, sit down for like an hour, and actually write it.

In any case, I'm very excited to hear your thoughts, whatever they might be, and in whatever form they may take! Kehehehe!

- Your Friend, Alucard